My name is Jessica Gabrielle Glover.

I moved to Nevada in 1985 when my parents decided they'd like a simpler life from the military. I started school at Nancy Gomez Elementary, Washoe County .

Like most children, I enjoyed playing outside, riding my bike, swinging on the swing set, and going camping all over Northern Nevada with my dad who was a hunter. As a child, most things seemed normal until my parents decided on divorce and what I had known to be a family was no more, including my mother.

My mother had never played with me as a child but she had groomed myself into believing she loved and cared for me. When I was 12, on my birthday I wished I had known I was living with a Narcissist, when she had me arrested for simply missing and wanting my dad & brother on my birthday. I wish a family member who knew of my mother's condition would had protected me.

From the age of 12 til 18, My mother and step father would keep myself locked away in the home where I was not allowed any friends, social events, etc. and if I had met a new friend at school who I showed empathy towards, that was my mother's fuel to have me locked away at Wittenburg Hall Juvenile Detention Center to The Mcgee Center for adolescent children. As my mother is a narcissist, she would be the only figure I would look to as she held the highest superiority and in her words no one would believe I was being emotionally and verbally abused each day, and each time I stood in front of a Judge because on the outside looking in I lived in a big bright house with food in my stomach and clothes on my back, though they were none less from thrift stores as my mother made a decent living working at various hospitals including the Veterans Hospital in Reno, Nevada.

My parents would make statements like, "No man will ever want you, your fat", "You are not smart enough to attend a college" , and "You will never amount to anything in life".

Hearing those statements over and over again during my high-school years at Edward C. Reed High School, I started to believe them as I tried my best in school yet my mother would decline any help with a tutor, and I lacked in my education due to not having a supportive family. Which when my mother removed myself from the home just two months after graduating in 2001, Hot August Nights week I'll never remember the fear of going into the world with less than basic knowledge to provide for myself. Getting turned down from employers because of lack of knowledge or my mother calling into my employer in her devious narcissistic manner telling lies to have my employment come to a halt.

That is when I got tired of always trying my best, working hard and not seeing any payoff as it resulted in myself becoming a sex worker. For ten years this was the only way I knew how to provide for myself with the lack of resources. From times I would run into law enforcement and face criminal charges, no one including the court system gave me another option, gave me an opportunity to learn and be a better person. I never had served more than thirty days in a county jail and that was most likely because of a bail bondsman not wanting to 'work' with a prostitute who had the credibility of not fleeing, and the justice system cared more about retaining fees knowingly where I would have to come up with the money to avoid having a warrant issued for an arrest because I didn't work the night before to pay a Judge's restitution fee. Also those choices in my life I had become pregnant and had to make the decision to place my baby for open adoption, where I had picked and chosen who would raise my baby boy to only have them lie to myself, and within six months of his life I was back in court fighting why my adoption should not be a closed adoption.

As of currently it has been three years since I have been allowed to visit and I rarely receive any updates, though his family is local, living in Lyon County.

In 2017, I started working on myself from the inside out from exercising, eating right and learning to love who the real person was inside me. Coming up with an exit plan to leave the adult business. Tesla became my dream job, where I knew I would have to have at least one year of experience to being considered for employment but I had made it and it was the best feeling in my life to walk inside Tesla on my orientation day, First day as an employee it was like something out of the academy awards. I was happy and proud of myself that I had finally achieved something on my own.

During my free time, I enjoy helping the homeless. Speaking to them and giving them hope that with Faith, they can to change their life around.

I love all animals, currently I have one cat who is my everything, my favorite place is beautiful Lake Tahoe, NV.

If given the opportunity, I would be an advocate for children and adults who are emotionally and verbally abused for the justice system to understand not all abuse comes from domestic violence.

I would advocate for sex workers and the homeless, to give them hope, for there to be more resources and offer encouragement. As I now understand when someone wants to take their life by suicide, it is most likely they want to end the pain but not their life. A homeless person who was not addicted to a drug, before becoming homeless, becomes addicted due to the environment and they've given up hope as they feel those in their life have given up on them.

Thank you for an opportunity of a lifetime,
Jessica Gabrielle Glover
